

Oregon: Salem — The hospital industry and state Republican lawmakers are at odds over how to spend the interest from Oregon's $2.2 billion national tobacco settlement. The industry wants the income designated for the Oregon Health Plan, which provides coverage for the state's needy. The GOP wants to earmark the money for anti-tobacco programs, low-income housing and senior and disabled transit systems.