

Philip Morris Distinguished Professor in Business and Society at Baruch College

Baruch College of The City University of New York invites nominations and applications for the position of Philip Morris Distinguished Visiting Professor in Business and Society for spring semester during the 1986/1987 academic year.

The Distinguished Visiting Professor is supported by an endowment from Philip Morris Companies, in honor of George Weissman, Baruch College 1939, LL.D. 1982, former chief executive officer and chairman of the executive committee of Philip Morris. The Distinguished Visiting Professor will conduct a special seminar for business and liberal arts students, deliver a public lecture inaugurating the residency, and be available for classes and counsel to other faculty and students. The term of the appointment is one semester.

Compensation, staff and research assistance, and office space appropriate to the rank of Distinguished Professor will be provided.

Candidates should present a record of outstanding scholarship or accomplishment in areas concerning the relationship between business and society, and a demonstrated capacity to integrate business disciplines with social, philosophical, political, scientific, or artistic disciplines.

Submit nominations or applications by April 30, 1986 to Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs, Baruch College, 17 Lexington Avenue, Box 514, New York, New York 10010.

One of the eight senior colleges of The City University of New York, Baruch offers undergraduate and graduate business programs fully accredited by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business and strong programs in the liberal arts and sciences and in education. Its 500-person faculty includes many eminent scholars, particularly in areas related to business and economics. The college is located in the Gramercy Park area of midtown Manhattan. AA/EOE
