

...whenever another guy comes in here and tells me he used to go on housecalls with his father on Sunday morning, that's when I'll hire someone....you're indicative of an attitude, and a feeling you have about people... it's not something you can just do...it's the family, the background, and character... So who's going to do the show? Sims? Sims is a great guy, but he couldn't do this show if his life depended on it..he's cold...clinical...totally... he's got the warmth of a fucking shark...but a nice guy...I like him...and he did a hell of a job on Joan's hysterectomy...but nobody would call him...they'd know in a minute the guy's a schneider...You're from an age that no longer exists... an era that no longer exists...There'll never be another Dr. Gennenfeld! You can't go back again...the schoolyard's too small....People don't understand my reference points...but I know what turns 'em on and what doesn't.....Take a few weeks ago, I was coming home and I tuned you in after the baseball game...remember that first caller.. older man, who had had VD...you told him—and you told your audience—that he had had gonorrhoea...you know how comfortable he must've felt to be able to call you and talk about it!?...he's from an era from over 30 years ago when VD was worse than divorce...and this old fart still needed to know from you.....

Dick Casper
—June 6, 1979