Doctors Ought To Care, DOC is a nonprofit organization created in 1977 to address a new dimension of social responsibility.

DOC is supported by thousands of physicians and other health professionals, the American Academy of Family Physicians, the American Medical Association, and many other professional and civic organizations.

The important audience DOC is reaching for is young people who have yet to develop habits which may cause future health problems. Doc's main concern is to help today's young people turn the tables on Madison Avenue's promotion of unhealthy lifestyles--to stop, think, and assume responsibility for their own lives.

Smoke Free Santa Fe is a four year project of the National Cancer Institute whose goal is to reduce the deaths and disability due to smoking. As a community intervention trial (COMMIT), they seek to change community norms about smoking.

Smoke Free Santa Fe provides resources to help the heavy smoker stop smoking. Call the Hotline at 989-7400 for information or support on smoking cessation.
