We Can't Stop Talking About...

...a power politico's book, a TV milestone, and the event all of Hollywood is attending.

Katie Couric Is a Woman on a Mission

After Katie Couric lost her first husband, Jay, and sister, Emily, to cancer, she learned this fact: Only one in 10 promising cancer research proposals gets government funding. "I thought we needed a national movement to help fund these scientists," she tells Glamour. That idea helped launch Stand Up to Cancer, the initiative that, in six years, has raised more than $260 million in pledges and revolutionized cancer research by mandating that SU2C scientists work collaboratively. "Now we're getting science from the lab to patients in three years—that's warp speed," she says. On September 5, SU2C will have its fourth telecast, and Couric wants to keep the country's foot on the gas pedal. "Jay died when our daughters, Ellie and Carrie, were six and two; they just graduated from college and high school, and they wish their dad could've been there," says Couric, now remarried. "I want those three words—you have cancer—not to be a death sentence."

We'll Take Womanpower for $1,000, Alex!

Thirty years ago this month, Jeopardy! premiered in syndication—and in its very first episode, copywriter Lois Feinstein, then 31, did womankind proud by becoming the first female contestant to put points on the board. The clue that won her $100: The "coq" in coq au vin. (Question: What is chicken?) Feinstein scored $7,500, paving the way for the likes of Julia Collins, who, with $428,100, became the series' winningest woman this June. Bet they kill at bar trivia too.

THE THREE WORDS KIRSTEN GILLIBRAND HATES MOST

"Having it all." Why? It's "absurd...for many reasons," the U.S. senator (D-N.Y.) writes in her new book, Off the Sidelines. "The first: For almost all mothers, earning money is a necessity, not a choice.... Second: The word have in that phrase drives me crazy. It sounds like women are being greedy, trying to finagle more than their fair share.... Last: It demeans women who do stay home with their children, by implying their lives are less full.... Let's stop talking about 'having it all' and start talking about the... challenges of 'doing it all.'"

A MUST-DO THIS MONTH

In the last midterm elections, in 2010, only 24 percent of 18- to 29-year-olds voted—that won't do come November 4, when we vote on most of Congress and many state offices. "Important issues like student loan debt...and women's health have been touched on by these officials in the past two years," says Ashley Spillane, new president of Rock the Vote, above. "Young people could be decisive in 2014. We have the power to flip elections." Her plea: On September 23, National Voter Registration Day, go to rockthevote.com to see how to register.

IT'S THAT WORTH IT.

Growing up in Texas, I didn't give sun safety much thought. Given my Latina heritage, my skin never burned and I assumed I wasn't at risk.

Today I know that sun exposure doesn't discriminate against skin color and can cause melanoma, brown spots, wrinkles, and worst of all, melanoma — the deadliest form of skin cancer and one of the most common cancers among women under 40.

So applying sunscreen throughout the day is my daily ritual. And it should be yours, too.

I also support the Melanoma Research Alliance — the leading funder of cutting-edge melanoma research. With your help, a cure may be within reach.

Learn about how you can join me in a nationwide movement to prevent melanoma and support life-saving research by visiting itsthatworthit.org. And remember to always wear your sunscreen!
