The Republican National Convention

The Republican 1916 Convention is to be held in Chicago on June 7th. The basis of representation has been changed. Instead of 1078 delegates accredited in 1912, there will be 949 in 1916. The loss is mainly in the Southern States.

Under the new rule of the National Committee the basis of representation is to be as follows: One delegate from each Congressional District, and an additional delegate for each district in which the vote for any Republican elector in 1908, or for the Republican nominee for Congress in 1914, shall have been not less than 7,500; four delegates-at-large from each state, and two delegates-at-large for each representative-at-large in Congress.

In some States the State Committee determines the time and the conditions of the party primary for the election of delegates. In twenty-two States, however, the primaries are a part of the regular election machinery, not controlled by the State Committee.

The Convention is called to order by the Temporary Chairman. The Permanent Organization then proceeds, with the election of the Permanent Chairman, who appoints, subject to the approval of the Convention, the various committees on Credentials, Platform, etc.

The Democratic National Convention

The Democratic National Convention meets this year in St. Louis on June 14th. The basis for delegate representation provides for two delegates from each Congressional District with delegates-at-large for Senators and representatives-at-large. Thus in 1912 there were 1088 votes in the Democratic Convention compared with 1078 in the Republican.

There are, however, two notably different rules prevailing in the Democratic Convention. These are the historic "unit" and "two-thirds majority" rules. Under the first, a State delegation under instructions from the State Convention, must cast its vote solidly for one candidate. Under the second, no candidate can be nominated except by a two-thirds vote of the Convention.

As to the routine of the Convention itself, the procedure is much the same in both parties. There is the preliminary roll made up by the National Committee, the speech of the Temporary Chairman, the election of the Permanent Officers, the appointment of Committees, followed by the nominations and the adoption of the platform.

THOMAS WOODROW WILSON was born in Staunton, Virginia, December 28, 1856. He was graduated from Princeton University in 1879, studied law at the University of Virginia, and later took his Ph. D. at John Hopkins University. He was associate professor of history and political economy at Bryn Mawr, held the same position at Wesleyan University from 1888 to 1890 and from then until 1902 was professor of jurisprudence and political economy at Princeton University. In the latter year he succeeded to the presidency of Princeton, being the first layman to hold that office.

In 1910 Mr. Wilson retired and was elected Governor of New Jersey.

In 1912 Mr. Wilson was nominated for the presidency by the Democratic National Convention on the forty-sixth ballot, and in November of the same year was elected the twenty-eighth President of the United States.

In 1885 Mr. Wilson married Miss Helen Louise Axson, who died in 1914. Later he married Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt.

He was renominated at the Democratic National Convention in St. Louis, on June 15th, 1916, as the party's presidential candidate.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES was born at Glens Falls, N. Y., April 11, 1862. He was graduated in 1881 from Brown University; in 1884 from the law school of Columbia University. He became a member of the law firm of Carter and Cravath, and from 1891 to 1893 was professor of law at Cornell University.

Mr. Hughes came into national prominence as attorney, in 1905, for the Armstrong Committee, appointed to investigate the great life insurance companies chartered by the State of New York. Nominated by the Republicans for Mayor of New York in 1905, he declined to be a candidate.

In 1906 Mr. Hughes was elected Governor of New York on the Republican ticket. In 1908 he was re-elected. His four-year administration resulted in the passing of important Public Service Commission laws, and laws to protect women and children factory workers. Although defeated in his efforts in behalf of a direct primary bill, the Governor's fight so stirred the people that the act was passed after he had retired. The closing of the race tracks was another notable achievement of the Hughes administration.

On October 6, 1910, Mr. Hughes became associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court, by appointment of President Taft. He was nominated at the Republican National Convention, in Chicago, on June 10th, 1916, as the party's candidate for President.
