Season's Greetings
FROM MARLBORO

FROM MARLBORO COUNTRY

But one of those similarities is the hunger for power. Zeng is the number one member of the new leadership, the only one close to Mao's close ties to Jiang. He is a challenge to Hu in a struggle for power. A leader at the top would not want a partner over his head. "I don't think I'm a better person in any way," says Zeng, a professor at C.U. Sichuan University. He is a former Communist Party boss and a former C.P. official. "I just believe in power and authority in the current regime." After years as Jiang's right-hand man, China's Machiavelli, he was more interested in leaving China than in another political career. "The Chinese system doesn't tolerate two strong people," says Zeng. "Hence we cannot have two gods." For adding, "And we cannot have two emperors." And a country cannot have two emperors. As a career student of history, Zeng was not wrong but better than anyone.
